'Little Steven' says students must end racism

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

ATLANTA — Steven van Zandt felt that apartheid wasn't getting enough attention and did something that he thought could change that. Now, he says, it's up to the college students.

Van Zandt is known as Little Steven, a former guitarist with Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band, who now has his own group, Little Steven and the Disciples of Soul.

Van Zandt organized the group Artists United Against Apartheid and is the co-producer and writer of "Sun City," an album intended to be a musical statement about apartheid directed at other performers.

He was in Atlanta Sunday at the symposium on apartheid to speak about Sun City. The conference was part of the weekend events organized by the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Change to commemorate the first national legal observance of King's birthday. During an interview after the symposium, van Zandt said that he became seriously interested in South Africa's policy of racial segregation about three years ago.

To gather more information about the actual situation in South Africa, van Zandt went there to talk to the people and find out the facts.

What he found was a country that for 30 years has been taking black people from areas near the cities, putting them on trucks, bringing them hundreds of miles to desolate areas of land and telling them that those areas are their homelands. The reason for this, he said, is that the government is trying to get all the black people out of South Africa.

Located in one of the 10 desolate areas to which blacks are sent is a resort by the name of Sun City.

According to Paul Irish, associate director of Africafund, Sun City was chosen as the name of the album, video and book because "it is a symbol of the denationalization of the black majority." Africafund is the organization that distributes money generated from "Sun City" sales to South African families of political prisoners, education projects and grass roots education.

Van Zandt said during his speech at the symposium that it's not hard to understand why

Council chooses downtown developer

By Jim McBride
Staff Writer

The City Council Wednesday unanimously selected Joblin and Associates of Little Rock, Ark. as the development firm for the city's proposed hotel-convention center project.

The decision, made during the council's special meeting Wednesday, now directs city staff to draft a contractual development agreement with Joblin and Associates to begin the development phase of the project.

The Joblin proposal calls for construction of an 11-story, 175 room, hotel-convention center in the 200 block of South Illinois Avenue. The project would be completed under a single development contract — one contractor, one architect — at a proposed cost of at least $11.815,000. In conjunction with the 86,700-square-foot hotel-convention center, a 375-space parking garage will be built under the hotel along the Monroe Street side of the structure.

Plans for the hotel-convention center include a 75-seat coffee shop, 32-seat gourmet dining room, health club, 100-seat entertainment lounge, lobby bar, 11,000 square feet of retail space and 10,000 square feet of banquet and meeting space.

The project will be financed by a $10 million "low floater" industrial revenue bond and $1.8 million in developer's equity.

A "low floater" financing approach is a low-interest, tax-exempt financing technique backed by a letter of credit from a large financial institution, City Finance Director Paul Sorgen said.

Robert Joblin, representing Joblin and Associates, earlier said he has successfully utilized the "low floater" approach in other development projects. Joblin was unable to attend the meeting because of other obligations.

The Council delayed the decision to choose a developer after it was disclosed by City Manager William Dixon at the meeting Jan. 13, that the other development group competing for the project, Crystal

Students, faculty may get ninth-week fall break

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

University students and faculty may get a chance to rest their weary minds and bodies nine weeks into the fall semester instead of waiting until Thanksgiving vacation, starting this year.

A proposal by President Albert Somit to institute a school vacation closer to the midway point of the fall semester is being scrutinized by several campus constituency groups.

The groups tentatively are scheduled to respond to the president's suggestion by the end of January. Should they approve it, Somit said he would like to have the vacation in effect for the 1986 fall term.

Written into the proposal are two options. One is to close the school on Wednesday, plus the following Thursday and Friday the week prior to the last weekend in October, as well as Thanksgiving Day and the following Friday.

The other option would have the University close on Thursday and Friday the week prior to the last weekend in October, plus the Wednesday prior to and the Friday following Thanksgiving Day.

Although these two options are in the president's proposal, he is not endorsing either.

"I am open to other suggestions," Somit said. "But the question we must ask" is this plan an improvement over the present arrangement?"

A pair of "other suggestions" have already been sent to Somit.

The Administrative and Professional Staff Council voted Jan. 8 to opt for a vacation on the Monday and following Tuesday of the ninth week of the fall semester, with the Wednesday prior to Thanksgiving and following Friday included.

"This is better so that classes on a Thursday and Friday, other than Thanksgiving and the following Friday, won't be canceled twice in a semester," said Charlena Bitting, AP

Jackson County bar hours may be shortened

By Tom Mangen
Staff Writer

A proposal to roll back closing hours for Jackson County bars will be considered by the county Judicial and Law Enforcement Committee Thursday, and battle lines are being drawn between proponents and opponents of the change.

"It will put us out of business," Dennis Immen, owner of the De Soto nightspot Du Maro, said Wednesday in defense of the county's bar owners, whose establishments are a common target of post-2 a.m. parties.

Jackson County Board member Michael Best says the revenue that the county receives by allowing its bars to stay open until 4 a.m. — two hours past the closing time in Carbondale — is not "worth the sacrifice in injuries, lives and property damage."

The county's 4 a.m. deadline for bar closing has been under scrutiny since the Jackson County Board meeting Dec. 11, when Leonard Snyder, who lives just north of Elkhart along U.S. Route 51, complained that drunk drivers were having accidents frequently near his property during the early morning hours, usually around 4:30 a.m.

Snyder urged the board to consider changing closing hours so that drunken drivers would be less likely to travel from cities or surrounding counties to Jackson County, where more alcohol is available.

The County Board sent the proposal to its Health and Safety Committee, where committee member Best made a motion to recommend a

Civil war to be resumed, Moslem militia leader says

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A top Moslem militia leader angered by Christian rejection of a Syrian-mediated peace accord announced Wednesday his fighters had resumed Lebanon's 10-year civil war. Syria blamed President Amin Gemayel for the breakdown of the pact.

Student aid applicants targeted by military

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary William Bennett agreed Wednesday to turn over the names of student aid applicants to help the military track down young men who have failed to register for the draft. Young men are required to sign up with the Selective Service within a month of turning 18 to be eligible for federal student aid. More than 15 million men, or 99 percent of those eligible, have reportedly registered.

Gramm-Rudman law prompts gloomy outlook

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mayors, congressmen and a federal employees' union Wednesday predicted severe pain across the government as a result of the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law. The first spending cuts under the new law are scheduled to go into effect March 1, but it was the second installment in the five-year plan that brought loud complaints.

Economy sluggish as GNP rises 2.3 percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The gross national product, reflecting a sluggish economy and a zooming trade deficit, increased just 2.3 percent in 1985, far short of the administration's goal, the government reported Wednesday. The results prompted Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and private economists to emphasize December's strong gains in employment, productivity, retail sales and housing starts.

Catholic Church stance on abortion assailed

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The executive director of Planned Parenthood in Rhode Island, who was excommunicated for supporting abortion, vowed Wednesday to spearhead the "right of reproductive freedom" for all Catholics. Mary Ann Sorrentino, who held the Planned Parenthood post for nine years, sharply criticized the Roman Catholic Church and the Diocese of Providence for "persecuting me for my personal beliefs."

Britain calls Iran hostage report 'rubbish'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A British Embassy spokesman Wednesday decried as "rubbish" a television documentary that said English diplomats in Iran turned out five U.S. officials seeking asylum after the 1979 takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The documentary, "Hostage in Iran," which was broadcast in Canada on Monday night and on the Public Broadcasting Service in the United States the next day, said the British denied sanctuary to the Americans because they feared losing trade with Iran.

Severe weather problems declined in '85, state says

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Fewer severe weather problems occurred in Illinois last year, but mishaps involving hazardous materials continued to increase, Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency officials said Wednesday. Only seven tornadoes were confirmed in Illinois last year, compared to the average of 25 tornadoes a year, officials said. In total, ESDA received 2,138 incident reports in 1985, down from 2,312 the year before.

State court upholds collective bargaining law

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A state appeals court, in an opinion released Wednesday, upheld the dismissal of a suit challenging the constitutionality of Illinois' collective bargaining law. The suit was brought by the Illinois Municipal League, which charged among other things that provisions allowing "fair-share" agreements, where non-union workers pay the equivalent of union dues, and permitting strikes were unconstitutional.

Stevenson knocks Thompson plans

By William Walker
Staff Writer

Two of the major movements in Illinois politics — Build Illinois and school consolidation — are ideas that are on the right track, but they need some adjustments, gubernatorial candidate Adlai Stevenson said at an impromptu question-and-answer session Wednesday.

Stevenson, who was in Southern Illinois to meet with party and labor leaders, said that if he were elected governor, he would have to take a "good, hard look" at Build Illinois, a program he says was devised by his opponent — incumbent Jim Thompson — for political reasons.

Improving the state's infrastructure is a good idea, Stevenson said, but the problem is that "the projects for the program are either Republican projects or Democrat projects."

"It's a good idea but badly executed," Stevenson said. "That's the trouble with Illinois — everything is decided for political reasons, not by what's good and what's bad."

As for school consolidation, Stevenson said he opposes a minimum limit for the number of students in a school district and instead prefers mandatory curriculum requirements.

"I see no correlation between school size and achievement," Stevenson said. "However, I do believe all schools should be able to educate children" to the levels necessary for entry into higher education.

At a recent press conference in Springfield, Stevenson outlined a proposal for school consolidation which would repeal present legal provisions that give preference for state money to unit school districts, require more public hearings, and extend by three months the deadlines for local groups to develop consolidation plans.

Under his plan, any school that can meet the curriculum requirements — which likely would be the college entrance requirements recently passed by the Illinois Board of Higher Education — would not have to consolidate, regardless of size.

Stevenson also has criticized Thompson, saying that he "flip-flopped" on the school consolidation issue by supporting the idea and later pledging to veto any attempt to set a "minimum, inflexible number of students in a district."

The current law, which was signed by Thompson, requires reorganization committees to devise plans for consolidation of school districts into high school districts of at least 500 students, elementary districts of at least 1,000 students and unit districts that comprise kindergarten through grade 12 of at least 1,500 students.

Stevenson said his plan would be aimed at doing what he could to honor the wishes of citizens who oppose consolidation, but he did stress the need for changes for educational purposes.

The group had earlier indicated to the council that equity and franchise commitments had been approved by authorized Ibis personnel.

After questioning Wallace

Palmer of Crystal Development Corp. Wednesday about the Crystal-Ibis proposal, some of the council members still had reservations about that proposal.

"I feel more confident of the Joblin plan," said Mayor Helen Westberg. "We need to stop chasing rainbows and deal with reality."

Councilman Neil Dillard called the Crystal-Ibis proposal "attractive," but said the Joblin proposal was ready to "work on." Councilman John Yow spoke in favor of the Crystal-Ibis proposal, but said the council's decision should be a "unified" one.

rollback. The motion died for lack of a second, as other committee members were less convinced that a change would be necessary or effective.

Committee member Greg Schaefer said that standardized closing hours within the county would not make a difference to drivers from neighboring counties, where the closing hours would still not match up with Jackson County. The problem of drunken drivers coming to the county from surrounding counties would only be half-solved, he said, unless the surrounding counties agreed to similar deadlines.

On Dec. 19, the Judicial and Law Enforcement Committee further discussed the issue with Jackson County Sheriff William Kilquist, Immen and Dennis Calufetti, owner of the Midland Inn on Old Rt. 13 southwest of Carbondale. Immen and Calufetti told the committee that moving the hours would force them to close, and no further recommendations emerged from the meeting.

Immen says that a two-hour reduction in the closing deadline would discourage people from traveling the extra distance to his establishment, and many regular customers would be deprived of a place to stop for a drink after work.

"People aren't going to drive out here at 1 a.m. if we close at 2. We get a lot of people who work at places like Gatsby's and CooCoo's, and they don't get off work until about 2:30 a.m.," Immen said.

Bost said Wednesday that he had contacted "hundreds" of people in the county who favored a rollback in the bar closing time, and that the only opponents were bar owners.

The main challenge, Bost said, is to convince a majority of the County Board members that the benefits of a reduction outweigh any lost revenues.

"Quite a few of the board members are against" a change, Bost said. "They feel it will take revenue away from the county. I'm collecting information to prove that it will save money, and possibly lives."

Bost said that some board members feel that they could change their minds if he can show them legitimate grounds for a change. He says that traffic accidents and the damage caused by them prove that there is a problem.

Statistics from the Illinois Department of Transportation showed that there were 12 fatal accidents in Jackson County in 1984, six of which were alcohol related. Four of the fatal accidents occurred between 2:10 a.m. and 5:10 a.m., and three of the drivers in those accidents were legally drunk.

Traffic accident statistics also show, however, that the number of accidents in the county in 1984 fell dramatically after 2 a.m. For instance, 54 accidents were recorded between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m., while 30 accidents were recorded between 2 a.m. and 3 a.m.

A total of 152 accidents were reported between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m., less than 10 percent of the 1,882 accidents in the county in 1984, the most recent year complete reports were available.

Immen says that newly imposed stiffer fines for drunk driving laws will have a greater effect on reducing the hazards of intoxicated drivers than a reduction in the closing hours.

The county's closing deadline had been 5 a.m. until 1973, when the deadline was moved to 4 a.m. The county experimented with a rollback for a month in August 1977, but protests from bar owners prompted the county to return to the 4 a.m. closing time.

Language barrier in college classes

MANY STUDENTS HAVE HAD the unfortunate experience of having a class with a professor or teaching assistant that they couldn't understand. It wasn't that the course material was above the students' capability to understand but that the instructor's command of the English language was poor, or that he spoke with a heavy accent.

Such a situation is frustrating. Time is wasted as students ask for statements to be repeated. Getting an answer to a question is tortuous to both parties. Many students may give up, stop asking for restatements or answers, drop the course or schedule classes to avoid international teaching assistants and faculty.

What a waste of time and tuition. When a person agrees to attend a school, the school agrees to provide instruction. Implied in this agreement is that the instructor be intelligible.

STATE SEN. PATRICK WELCH (D-Peru) has offered a solution to the problem. He has sponsored a bill requiring all state universities and community colleges to develop and administer an oral fluency test to all professors, teaching and graduate assistants. He wrote the bill after hearing complaints from undergraduates at Northern Illinois University, where teaching assistants teach many freshman and sophomore classes. The teaching assistants are required to pass a written proficiency test.

SIU requires graduate students receiving assistantships and teaching positions to pass an oral test given by the Graduate School, the Center for English as a Second Language and the appointing department. However, even that test can't simulate classroom conditions, where impromptu question and answer sessions take place. In addition to the experts, an undergraduate student (preferably freshman or sophomore) from the department should be on the testing panel.

ALSO, THE GRADUATE SCHOOL does not require the oral test of international students who received a bachelors degree from an American institution. Assuming that these people are orally proficient in English is a mistake; they should be tested. Understanding and writing a second language is different from being able to speak it. International students may have been able to take notes, understand instructions and write papers. But testing their knowledge of spoken English by putting them in a classroom can be unfair to them and to the students they are supposed to be helping.

Letters

Polygraph use unfair

Recently the U.S. Secretary of State refused to submit to polygraph (lie detector) testing, with wide news coverage. This same situation exists at Tuck Tape in Carboneale but with very different results and no public exposure. Hopefully this letter will cause the public to be aware of a situation which would appear to warrant legislative action.

Tuck Industries, during an investigation of suspected employee theft, has mandated that selected employees must submit to and pass polygraph tests as a basis of continued employment. Several employees refused to submit to testing and were suspended and will probably be discharged.

Is polygraph testing legal and is it a viable method for determining guilt or innocence?

I am told that Illinois law does not specifically protect an employee from polygraph testing and subsequent dismissal unless he is a public service employee.

I am also told that polygraph results are not admissible in any court by law. This certainly appears to validate most anti-polygraph claims that polygraph results are often wrong, thus clearing the guilty and falsely convicting the innocent.

In this case, it appears that only the company-union labor agreement may stand between these employees and unemployment.

As a salaried member of management with an area company, I empathize with Tuck management, but feel their methods are counterproductive.

I feel that a full public airing of polygraph uses and resultant legislation would be advisable. — Gary L. Gravatt, Carterville.

Call for nuclear free zone

In the coming spring semester, students will be hearing a lot about something called a nuclear free zone, but not many will know exactly what this is.

Simply stated, a nuclear free zone says that no nuclear weapons can be transported through, launched from, researched or stored in a specific area.

We at MidAmerica Peace Project feel that there are already far too many nuclear weapons in the world. Furthermore, if people don't start taking the initiative to end the arms race, it might become irreversible.

Accordingly, a nuclear free zone is a concrete way that we can say "no" to the arms race. If enough people declare their homes, neighborhoods, towns, schools and countries to be nuclear free zones, there will be no place left in the world to put nuclear weapons.

We at MAPP intend to initiate a campus-wide campaign to have SIU-C declared a nuclear free zone.

Some people feel that our efforts will be futile, and that we will be wasting our time and resources. To answer these criticisms, we simply call attention to existing nuclear free zones, worldwide. Schools such as Cal State Fullerton, the University of Oregon, and six of the University of Wisconsin campuses were voted nuclear free zones by the students. The city of Evanston was also recently voted to be a nuclear free zone.

Entire countries such as New Zealand and Australia are now nuclear free zones. In fact there are thousands of schools, cities, counties, and even countries world-wide that have been voted to be nuclear free zones by their residents.

In order for SIU-C to be declared a nuclear free zone, we must first get approximately 1,700 signatures on a petition, to get a referendum placed on the spring student election ballots. Next, students will vote on the issue. If successful, the results will be presented to the student government and the Board of Trustees. It will be an uphill battle, but we feel that there is no single more important cause to fight for.

If we are to succeed in our fight, we will need everyone's help. If you feel that there are too many nuclear weapons in the world, and would like to help us end the arms race (at least in our little corner of the world) then stop by our third floor Student Center office, or call 457-6056 to find out how you can help. The future of the world is in our hands. — Brian Blank, chairman, Mid-America Peace Project.

GPSC explains day care position

There has been much discussion lately concerning the construction of a day care center on campus to accommodate Rainbow's End Preschool which may be displaced from its current facility by the end of the year. The purpose of this letter is to clear up some misunderstandings concerning the Graduate and Professional Student Council's official stance on this issue.

During the last semester Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, presented the GPSC with a proposal to maintain the $3.25 fee increase originally designated for the remodeling of WIDB and scheduled to expire with the summer session, 1986. The fund created by the continuance of this fee would be used to finance projects that would be "nice to have," according to Swinburne. One of the projects he suggested for financing by such a fund was a day care facility. Another proposed project was an outdoor amphitheater.

Considering the "slush fund" and the day care center for what they are — separate issues — GPSC rejected the contention that separate projects should be proposed and funded on an as-needs basis.

However, the GPSC does recognize the need for a day care facility and does support the idea of building one. We have passed a resolution calling for the seeking of capital improvement funds from the state to build such a facility.

In the current facility, faculty and staff have top priority and many students (around 110) are on a waiting list. The higher service charge for facility and staff (the program uses a sliding scale based on parents' income) subsidizes the program and allows students to pay less. Swinburne indicated the ratio of non-student to student users would change little with the new facility.

Having considered the possibility of not being able to receive state funding the GPSC Executive Board has considered alternative ways of financing it through student fees. However, the Executive Board does not support the building of such a facility with student money if students will not have top priority for its use. — Neil Holt and Darrell Johnson, GPSC Executive Board.

'Free at last...'

The historic first observance of a national holiday honoring the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was centered in Atlanta, Ga., where 47 SIU-C students and others went by bus to join in the salute to the civil rights leader.

The SIU contingent saw Bishop Desmond Tutu of South Africa receive the King Non-Violent Peace Drive Award for his struggle against apartheid. They heard King's widow, Coretta Scott King, urge the nation to carry on the work toward King's dream of elimination of racism and poverty.

They watched Vice President George Bush and Mrs. King place a wreath at King's tomb, inscribed with words from one of his most famous speeches, "Free at last. Free at last. Thank God almighty, I'm free at last." And they joined thousands in a parade symbolic of the marches that King led to free people from racial inequality and injustice.

Pershing Rifle Team to march in Mardi Gras

By Darci Allen
Staff Writer

Atten-shun!

In February, the command will be given and the SIU Pershing Rifle Team will march through New Orleans as they take part in the Mardi Gras Parade.

Twenty members of the team will make the trip to New Orleans.

This is the first time the team will be participating in the Mardi Gras Parade as the Pershing Rifle Team, said Steve Moore, the group's public information and recruiting officer. In the past the team has gone as the Army ROTC color guard.

"We have been there before and they (parade committee) wrote and asked us to come back again, Moore said.

"It's almost a free trip because the Army ROTC pays for our transportation," said Moore.

The team will stay at the Naval Support Activity and Naval Regional Medical Center located three miles outside of New Orleans.

The team performs to cadences as commands are given. Team members use old M-1 rifles that are in top condition, said Moore.

The Pershing team used to be part of the ROTC program, but broke away because "the ROTC had a small team and bad planning," said Moore.

The basis of the Pershing team is to give members leadership qualities and to help them obtain daily and personal goals, said Moore. Members are taught to have more control and to be more assertive about these goals, he said.

People in the old drill team said the Pershing team gives them more opportunity, according to Moore.

The team competes against other teams on a nationwide basis, said Moore. The team has been to other parades in the area and after the Mardi Gras, will go to a parade in St. Louis, he said.

The team is under the direction of Dennis Hardy.

Doctor funds scholarship

A $10,000 donation by retired Carbondale radiologist Dr. Leo J. Brown will provide a teacher education scholarship worth $400 to $1000 per year to a junior or senior in the College of Education.

Brown holds a bachelor's degree in education from Southern Illinois Normal University and a bachelor of science and medical degree from the University of Illinois. He taught physics briefly at SIU in 1949 and was a charter member of the Board of Trustees, created in 1949.

Kinsey sex study follow-up set

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Almost four decades ago Alfred Kinsey shocked the nation by exposing the sexual practices of Americans, and now researchers from the Kinsey Institute plan to re-interview some participants to show how early sexual experiences affect people later in life.

Kinsey interviewed 12,000 people and released detailed reports on his research in 1948 and 1953. No subject was excluded from the 300 original questions as the study asked about everything from abortion to sex dreams.

Although the information would not be shocking today, the new study could show how early sexual experiences affect people later on and provide insights into aging, memory and today's sexual attitudes, researchers said.

"We know very little about lifelong sexuality," said June Reinisch, director of the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction. "We'll be able to see what they remember and what they don't remember. Then we'll have sex information from college age to senior citizens."

The institute is seeking a $1 million federal grant for the three-to-four-year study. If the money is granted, the study will begin next December at the earliest, Reinisch said.

"If we don't do it in this decade, the Kinsey population will die off, and we'll never have a population like it again," she said.

Kinsey researchers, based on the Indiana University campus, plan to re-interview 2,000 to 4,000 of the original subjects to see how their sex lives have changed in the last 38 years.

Reinisch estimated that two-thirds of the people interviewed for the original reports are still alive today and are in their 50s and 60s.

"They visit us on a regular basis," Reinisch said. "They ask when we will interview them again. They say so much has happened."

The new study will document the sex lives of the middle-aged and elderly. For example, it will show how medicine for heart disease and high blood pressure can cause impotence.

Some say the new study is not worth it.

"I wouldn't give it any money if I was running a foundation," said Thomas Szasz, a psychiatrist at the State University of New York in Syracuse.

"It's going to show that people's sex lives are more relaxed today, but that they still have the same basic problems. So what else is new?" Szasz said.

"Bugler of the Moors," a graphite drawing by art instructor Dan Wood, is the first piece of art by a non-Mexican to be exhibited in the Mexican National Arts Museum.

Art prof's drawing first foreign one in Mexican gallery

By Maureen Cavanagh
Staff Writer

Dan Wood, associate professor in art, has become the first non-Mexican to have a drawing exhibited in the Instituto Nacional De Bellas Artes, the Mexican National Arts Museum in north central Mexico.

The drawing, titled "Benigno Rangel, Corneta De Los Moors" or "Bugler of the Moors," was completed by Wood in 1974. Now part of a permanent collection, the drawing has been placed prominently in the foyer of the museum, located in Zacatecas.

The drawing is of a recently deceased Zacatecas resident, Benigno Rangel. Wood first encountered Rangel while on a sabbatical in Zacatecas in 1974.

Rangel participated annually in the Festival of Morismo, which originated in Spain and reenacts the battle between the Christians and the Moors. Rangel, one of 5,000 participants in the festival, modeled for Wood in the ceremonial robe he donned as a bugler.

Wood's drawing represents Rangel in full costume playing the brass bugle that he carried in battle. The drawing took Wood two months to complete, using only graphite pencils, a sharpener and a kneaded eraser.

Wood used a series of 10 different graphite pencils to give the drawing different tones ranging from lights to velvet-blacks. The pencils were made with powdered graphite and rectified turpentine mixed into a paste and then applied with a soft brush and polished with a cotton swab.

Wood said he used a magnifying glass to incorporate extraordinary detail into the drawing, especially around Rangel's face.

Rangel's chin, eyebrows, eyelashes, mustache and fingernails required minute attention. Wood said he used a pencil sharpened to a tip like a hypodermic needle for the detail.

The drawing as very subtle and Wood directs most of the attention to Rangel's face. Rangel looks about 60 years old. He has a determined yet humble look, which is profiled, as he extends the bugle to play. His wrinkles are intricate and the pupil of his eye keen. His nose is conspicuous.

He is wearing a medieval turban, Arabic in origin.

Wood said in the last half-century, Zacatecas, founded by the Spaniards in 1500, has undergone extensive renovation of its colonial buildings. Wood said "the Florence of Mexico," became his Shangra-La. He returned to visit a small town just south of Zacatecas, Villanueva, every year since 1974. He describes the area as "dynamic and vital."

In 1975, Wood returned to Zacatecas to hold a one-man exhibition of the drawings he completed during his sabbatical in 1974. The exhibit was inaugurated by the governor of Zacatecas who also purchased one of Wood's drawings and gave it as a gift to the Mexican national minister of tourism. Wood's exhibition later traveled to the state museums in Gaudajalara and San Luis Potosi.

Three years ago, Federico Sescose, director of the Junta de Monumentos de Zacatecas, invited Wood to place "Benigno Rangel, Corneta De Los Moors" in the permanent collection of the Instituto Nacional De Bellas Artes.

The nationally syndicated Mexican newspaper El Sol de Zacatecas quoted the director of the museum, J. Alvaro Ortiz, as follows: "Normally we would not allow the work of a foreigner in our museum. However, we have made an exception for Dan Wood because the artist is a Zacatecan at heart. But, more importantly, because of the work's extraordinary quality."

Shortly after Wood completed the drawing in 1974, it was sold to a collector, who in turn sold it to another. Last year, Wood repurchased the drawing and sold it to Dennis Immen of Carbondale who then donated the work to the museum.

Immen said he collects Wood's art because they are all "intricate and meticulous."

Wood said his drawing is like a musical piece. The different tones give the drawing a rhythm.

Wood, a 17-year veteran instructor at SIU-C, is currently teaching "Introduction to Art and Basic Drawing." He is also writing a book titled, "Materials and Techniques of Drawing."

Reagan acts on tax reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan asked Senate Republicans Wednesday to rally around his top legislative priority by rewriting major portions of a House-passed tax bill so the final product offers Americans "true tax reform."

Meeting over breakfast with most of the 53 Republican senators, as the 99th Congress eased into its second session, Reagan said, "We want a revenue-neutral tax reform bill as soon as possible."

"The House-passed bill is not a final product," he said in comments relayed by White House spokesman Larry Speakes. "It is a beginning."

The call to arms on tax reform, a cause Reagan championed during thousands of miles of travel and more than two dozen appearances last year, came as the battle lines began to emerge over fiscal priorities brought on by the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law.

With budget cuts at center stage, Reagan said he is encouraged by predictions from Senate GOP leader Robert Dole and Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., of the Senate Finance Committee that a tax reform bill could clear the Senate by June.

Simultaneously, he warned Congress against using that bill to raise taxes to offset painful spending cuts required by Gramm-Rudman to meet declining deficit targets next year and beyond. For fiscal 1987, the required savings could exceed $60 billion.

"We're convinced the American people want true tax reform," Reagan said. "The House has taken a good first step, but we are looking forward to working with you in the Senate to produce a true tax reform bill."

Reagan, who was slow to endorse the tax reform bill passed by the House, however, acknowledged the measure would reduce individual tax rates to their lowest levels since 1931, cut corporate rates to their lowest levels since 1941.

Inflation decreases a bit in 1985

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation was slightly lower in 1985 than 1984 as the Consumer Price Index rose a modest 3.8 percent for the year and 0.4 percent in December, the Labor Department said Wednesday.

The department's figures said that if the seasonally adjusted monthly increase in consumer prices had held to 0.3 percent last month, the 1985 inflation rate would have been the lowest since 1971 and 1972, when inflation rose only 3.4 percent each year.

Instead, the 1985 inflation rate of 3.8 percent was slightly below the 1984 level of 4 percent and tied the 1983 rate.

The monthly increase of 0.4 percent for December was lower than November's 0.6 percent jump. On average, prices rose in 1985 at a rate of about 0.3 percent a month, the department's bureau of labor statistics said.

Substantial increases in the cost of food and energy fueled about half the December increase. Grocery prices jumped 1 percent last month as prices for meat, fish, poultry, eggs, fresh fruit and vegetables went up.

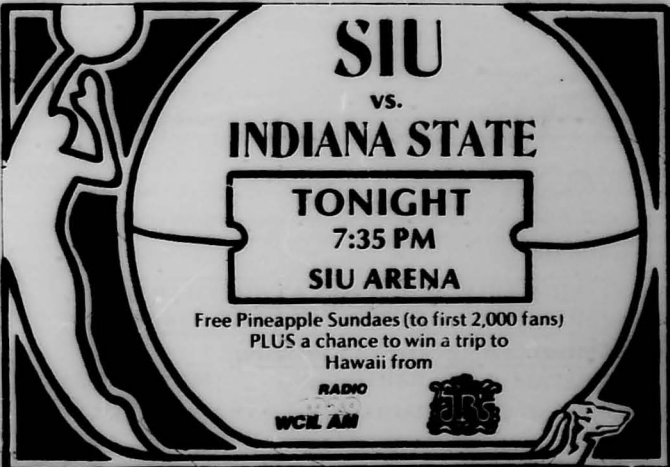

Overall, food and beverage costs went up 0.8 percent in December — the biggest monthly increase in that category since early 1984.

Passenger service expected at airport soon

By William Walker
Staff Writer

Recent talks between officials of the Southern Illinois Airport Authority and Trans World Express about the resumption of TWE passenger service at the airport may bring results "hopefully any moment," says Floyd Hart, Airport Authority chairman.

Hart said that the talks with the airline, which pulled out of the airport Dec. 15, were "very frank," and that the airport board is now waiting for the airline to submit some necessary ridership figures before making another move.

TWE, which serves as a commuter link for parent Trans World Airline's hub in St. Louis, has cited low ridership as its reason for the pullout, but Hart places much of the blame for the problem on the airline itself.

"Their performance wasn't good. It was very poor," Hart said after a meeting of the airport board Tuesday. Specifically, he said the airline had too many canceled and delayed flights. He also criticized the company's failure to launch an aggressive advertising campaign.

But Hart also criticized local travel agents for their failure to promote TWE while it served the airport. He said that airline officials were angry at one travel agent who repeatedly sold tickets to competing airlines at Williamson County Airport, and this, he said, was part of the reason for the pullout.

"When the travel agents in your community won't support your community and continue to sell tickets to a competing airport, it's a very, very sick situation," Hart said in previous press accounts. He did not disclose the name of any travel agents.

In a telephone interview, one local travel agent agreed that TWE did not receive much local support, but he placed the blame on the airline for what he called its "extremely erratic" service.

Dirk Borgsmiller, manager of Borgsmiller Travel in Carbondale, said that his agency did not purposely neglect TWE, but he said the airline was driving away customers because of its frequency of late and canceled flights, which often left passengers to be transferred to Williamson County Airport and another airline.

"We prefer to book the most reliable service that best fits the needs of our customers," Borgsmiller said. However, he said that he would be "glad to have them (TWE) back," and he believes the airline could be successful if it would offer "good fares, good connecting schedules and consistency."

He added, though, that the airline might have trouble winning back customers who were disrupted by the abrupt pullout in December and that it will be hard to beat the low fares — roundtrip to Chicago for as little as $98 — now being offered at the Williamson County Airport.

But Bob Zimmer, owner of Zimtran Travel, disagreed with statements about poor service on the part of TWE. He said the airline, with which his company previously did most of its business, had a service record better than the industry average, with a high 90 percentage rate of completed and on-time flights.

However, Zimmer did agree that TWE lacked support from most local travel agents, but he said he had no idea why that was the case.

During the board meeting, Mike Kimmel, the board's representative to the newly formed Airline Search Committee, told the board that the committee is in the process of finding out more information about airlines that serve the Midwest.

The search committee is looking at any airline that could possibly serve the airport, Kimmel said, but because "the industry is in such a state of flux, it's difficult to find out who's on first."

The committee wants "to make sure we have the feel of what exactly is the market out there," Kimmel said, and he added, "We're going as fast as we can."

Kimmel said the committee, which was formed to serve in an advisory capacity to the airport board, will still be useful even if a decision is reached with TWE before the committee makes a recommendation, because its purpose is threefold: to look at the air transportation needs of the area and see how they can best be solved; to investigate possible airlines; and to help sell to the public, on a continuing basis, whatever decision is made.

Hart said that although other airlines might be considered, TWE is "still the best possible solution" because of its relationship with TWA, which is one of two airlines that does extensive business at St. Louis' Lambert Field.

Most people traveling to St. Louis are going to catch a connecting flight, Hart said, and there probably is no other airline that could compete with TWE because of its ability to offer low connection rates with TWA.

Ozark, the other airline with a St. Louis hub, uses Ozark Midwest as its commuter line. Ozark Midwest now serves Williamson County Airport.

Former plant-soil expert dies at 65

James B. Mowry, a retired professor of plant and soil science, died Monday from complications related to diabetes at Carbondale Memorial Hospital. He was 65.

Services for Mr. Mowry, who developed disease resistant apples and pears, were held at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Huffman Funeral Home in Carbondale.

Mr. Mowry joined the School of Agriculture in 1951 until his retirement in 1980. He founded the Illinois Horticulture Experimentation Station, a link in a nationwide apple and peach breeding co-operative involving SIU, the University of Illinois, and Purdue and Rutgers universities.

Mr. Mowry was born in Peoria. He earned a bachelor's degree at the U of I, a master's degree from Purdue and a doctorate from Rutgers.

He received top awards from the Illinois Horticulture

Society and the American Pomological Society, for which he served on the national executive board.

Mr. Mowry wrote more than 100 scientific articles and books on fruit breeding and helped develop more than 20 varieties of apples. He also released an apple variety called Blaze and a peach variety called Comanche.

Mr. Mowry flew 80 missions in Europe as a pilot for the Air Corps during World War II and was decorated for his service.

He is survived by his wife, Donna, a son, brother, daughter and sister.

Visitation will begin at noon. Burial will be at Oakland cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations to the National Kidney Foundation of Illinois or to the American Diabetes Association Downstate Affiliate Inc. are requested.

Training set by Synergy

Synergy is now interviewing for volunteer training in communications and crisis intervention skills. The training enables volunteers to learn how to share their feelings and help others in an agency setting. Synergy provides 24-hour crisis intervention, referral service and peer counseling.

Interviews will be conducted through Jan. 27. Training sessions begin Jan. 27. For more information, stop by the geodesic dome at 905 S. Illinois Ave., or call 549-3333. SIU credit is available.

Hotline gives information, advice to gay community

By Maureen Cavanagh
Staff Writer

The number is 529-GAYS. It is a hotline intended to help gay males, lesbians and bisexuals, their friends, families or other concerned callers.

The regular phone line hours are 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. daily. When volunteers are not there to answer the phone, a recording is played: "Hi, this is LGT, or, Lesbian and Gay Talk. If you need immediate assistance, call Synergy at 549-3333 or Network at 549-3351."

"Williamson or Franklin County residents may call Synergy at 985-6161, or Network at 937-6483." And, later, "Welcome to LGT.... We're committed to the gay male and lesbian community and to ease the barriers that separate us from each other and from our larger community."

THE RECORDING also gives a calendar of events, AIDS updates and one or two feature items, such as literary excerpts called "Fairy Tales for Grown Ups." Also on the recording agenda are film and music reviews, the SIU-C women's athletics schedule and notices about events or meetings sponsored by the Gay and Lesbian People's Union and the Metropolitan Community Church, a local Christian church that is sensitive to the gay and lesbian population.

When any of the 24 trained volunteers are there, they answer phones and speak with individuals seeking information about sexuality.

MICHAEL BOTKIN, graduate student in psychology, said training began for hotline telephone workers last April. The hotline began operation in October. The 36-hour training teaches the workers how to communicate with someone who has a problem, he said.

Botkin said the number of callers varies. He estimates about 100 callers monthly. "A common issue right now is 'coming out'—how to do it and where to go." They also call for "emotional support for the process," he said.

Another priority of callers is to gain information about AIDS. "People want to know how it is transmitted, what is less risky than others. We give them 'safe sex' guidelines," he said.

"PEOPLE MIGHT be afraid to walk in somewhere and pick up an AIDS pamphlet. Calling the hotline is the easiest and least threatening way to gain information about AIDS or anything sexual, let alone gay or lesbian issues," he said.

Although the hotline workers will answer questions from and regarding heterosexuals, Botkin said that, speaking for himself, he is most comfortable answering questions about gays or lesbians.

Most of the callers are gay males, he said.

Most of the workers are gay themselves and are involved in social or mental health fields, he added.

BOTKIN CITED a "massive survey" conducted by Alfred Kinsey, who, in the 1930s, studied the sexual practices of Americans. The survey concluded that 10 percent of the population is gay or lesbian—which translates to possibly 3,000 members in the gay and lesbian community at SIU-C, he said.

No "desperate" calls have been made so far, Botkin said. The callers are generally "slightly confused" or are new in town and would like to learn about gay or lesbian functions, he said.

IN AN emergency situation, such as someone who has the means to commit suicide nearby on the phone, LGT hotline workers call Network, a crisis hotline run by the Jackson County Community Health Center. Network will send a trained psychologist to the home of the potential suicide victim, he said.

Gay and Lesbian Talk is funded by grants and donations.

Terry Hanson, hotline worker and member of the GLT board of directors, says it is mandatory to have "listening skills" while answering calls.

For example, "coming out" can be a terrifying experience, he said, and many may want to deny it, but the workers must listen and take each individual into account. Being homosexual is still "not acceptable" to the greater society, Hanson said.

THE HOTLINE receives its "fair share" of prank calls, he said, but the number has "died down" since the operation started in October. "Why is it so important to them to call? Why do they harass people? Aren't there other things they could be doing?" he asks.

Hanson said being gay or lesbian "should not be an issue." There are still no role models. His impression when he was young, he said, was that homosexuals were all "child killers or something."

HE SAID that people need "to glimpse into the whole person. Sexual orientation is only one part of that person. It is a part that certainly should not be denied. It should be explored."

Nor should any stigma be attached to a person because he has a different sexual preference, he said.

Hanson said LGT is recruiting volunteers and an increase in interest may indicate a "growing awareness of the need" for the hotline.

Hanson and Botkin said LGT, in addition to operating the hotline, sponsors activities such as coffeehouses and is planning functions, including a prom at Mainstreet East, for Gay Awareness Week, which begins April 6.

performers go to Sun City when they get paid approximately $20,000 a day for as many as 10 days.

Van Zandt has been trying to achieve a total boycott by performers of the Sun City Resort and that they refrain from entertaining there despite efforts by the resort to retain them by telling them that it is located in an independent country, although it is actually a homeland created by the government.

But now, after the "Sun City" album, video and book, it's time for the college students to get involved again, he said.

"It's very, very important what they do. It's up to the colleges to wake up and start getting active again and start getting conscious again," van Zandt said.

During the symposium on apartheid, speakers said many times that one of the reasons people won't get involved in the struggle against apartheid is that they feel racial inequality is the problem of the people in South Africa and not of people in the United States. According to van Zandt though, that is not the proper attitude people should have.

"It's not just a problem that's 7,000 miles away. Racism still very much exists here. It's the same racism, it's the same struggle," van Zandt said. "It's up to them (students) to fight it. It's not out of reach."

Getting people to take action is something he said college students have the power to influence.

"So we have to begin to wake up again and get active and make sure we divest, make sure we do not go from college and work for companies that do business with South Africa and let them know that. There's plenty to do," he said. Van Zandt also said that students should begin by getting information from reliable sources such as the United Nations Special Committee on Apartheid or Africafund.

"The government has been on a campaign to infiltrate college campuses these last few years with a lot of false propaganda," van Zandt said. "An entire campaign is being waged to try and keep college students quiet, keep them manipulated. We have to fight through that and get to the truth and start speaking again."

The creation of a federal legal holiday honoring the late Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, van Zandt said, is "one of the great achievements of our time."

Council chair.

The Civil Service Employees Council approved a proposal during its meeting Jan. 8 that would bypass a Thanksgiving holiday reduction by just starting fall semester classes one week earlier.

Otherwise, "we would be displacing almost 5,000 students for four days" said Max Waldron, CESC chairman, in an SIUCourier interview.

One point of contention over the president's proposal is that, in either option, the University would close campus housing during the October respite.

Waldron explained that a number of students are too far away from home to make a round-trip transit between campus and their family residence in just four days, and would be stuck in Carbondale without lodging.

But Somit said selected dormitories would be kept open for people unable to leave town, an arrangement already instituted for the existing spring and Thanksgiving vacations.

Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne said that "it would be a problem not to close the dorms. Keeping them open with nobody there would add a considerable amount to the cost, if you consider electricity and food service and things like that."

Somit said his priorities in considering a vacation plan are "what would constitute a proper vacation period for students as well as staff," the "reasonableness" behind a student schedule that would necessitate cancelling some classes and campus economics.

But Somit declined to elaborate on his priorities.

"I am prepared to look at all of the ideas submitted to me, and from one of those I will make a decision," he said. "These are just the priorities I will keep in mind."

Tony Appleman, Undergraduate Student Organization president, said he is in favor of the break from an academic standpoint, but sees other problems.

"I see economic problems for the students," Appleman explained. "It's not practical for many students to make two trips home in the same semester, which is what would happen if all the dorms close."

He added that students would have more class time to work on projects with the ninth-week vacation, instead of dealing with both projects and exams during the Thanksgiving holiday.

But Appleman also sees the possibility of the October portion of the break interfering with the observance of Carbondale's annual Halloween festivities.

"As you recall, the Halloween celebration came the weekend before Oct. 31, 1985," he said.

Jerry Bryant, host of Jesus Solid Rock, which airs Sunday evenings on WCIL, introduces a song.

Christian rock gaining attention, promoter says

By Karen Mellinghausen
Student Writer

Dressed as killer bees — in tight black and yellow leather, spiked arm bands, long hair and playing wild, screaming guitars — it's Stryper.

The band members may appear to be average heavy metal rock and rollers, but their message is all peace, all love. Stryper is one of the many contemporary Christian rock recording groups today.

Jerry Bryant, who has been promoting Christian rock for more than 13 years, considers himself "one of the pioneers of promoting Christian rock music." Bryant, the pastor of an informal, non-denominational church in Carbondale and an SIU-C graduate in radio-television and cinema, has had the opportunity to meet and promote scores of these artists.

IN 1972, he became a coordinator and disc jockey of "Jesus Solid Rock," a local Christian rock show. It began on WTAO and is now aired Sunday nights on WCIL.

"When I started out," Bryant said, "I only had six or seven albums to my name and I played them over and over. Gradually things began to emerge from all over the world. Now I have thousands of albums."

Christian rock has been evolving for more than 20 years. However, it has gained attention only in the last three years because many people were reluctant to mix religious and secular music. Many in the industry believe that it was not until 1978, when Bob Dylan recorded an album of Christian rock songs, that Christian rock began to be accepted by secular artists.

REFERRING TO Dylan, Bryant said, "I've only met him one time. He's a very reclusive type person and you can tell he's been deeply wounded."

His relationship with other rock musicians, perhaps not as famous as Bob Dylan, have given him an edge in the production of his radio show. He knows something about both ends of the business — performing and promoting.

Christian rock is still a minority when compared to other types of popular music, but it is gaining more and more recognition. Last year, about 20 million contemporary Christian rock albums were sold as part of a $400 million business of concerts and paraphernalia, including T-shirts with such unconventional sayings as "Sin Sucks."

"Now Christian rock groups are spending $100,000 on an album and using top equipment. We have nothing to be ashamed of as far as the music's concerned," Bryant said.

THIS MUSIC also has grown into an industry with its own trade magazines such as Contemporary Christian Magazine and MusicLine. In Colorado there is a Bible college for contemporary Christian musicians.

Bryant said that about 20 radio stations in America program nothing but Christian rock. Also, syndicated Christian rock programs reach 100 U.S. radio stations, most of which are secular in format.

Advocates of Christian rock view the music as a tool to get people, especially teenagers, to think about real life issues. The impact rock music has on young people is tremendous, and the message it brings is taken very seriously by them. Many Christians, including Bryant, feel this tool is necessary to teach them how to love, among other things. They feel it's time to start raising standards of young people.

"I'M NOT a puritan by any means," Bryant said. "I've done my share of awful things. But there's got to be a limit."

He said that there are basically two types of lyrics in these songs. One type addresses the real issues of life: abortion, nuclear war, apartheid and terrorism. The other category is that which teaches how to have a relationship with God and states a purpose in life.

"The whole reason this radio show came about was the fact that my wife and I had some problems," Bryant said as his animation slowed and his voice hesitated. "My best friend came over from the University to counsel with her and she fell in love with him and moved in with him. And they left town together."

"I DIDN'T have my act together and I had to find a greater power. It's been 14 years and I really haven't had any hatred in my heart toward him. Now that's what the lyrics are about. Real life experiences," he said.

In recent years, Christian rock has begun to cross over into the secular market. Leading the way to popular acceptance is Amy Grant, winner of three Grammy awards, three gold albums and one platinum album. She ranked number 27 in Billboard Magazine's Top 40 chart and three of her concerts were sold out shows at Radio City Music Hall.

Christian rock has not, however, been accepted by all members of the religious community. Leading the crusade against Christian rock are the fundamental Christians.

TELEVISION EVANGELIST Jimmy Swaggart was quoted as saying, "Wedding the Gospel to rock music is a marriage made in hell."

Philip Bickel, another fundamentalist, said that the "apathetic rock audience assumes the Gospel is no different than their own, self-serving apathy." Many fundamentalists fear that rock music is replacing religion, not enhancing it.

Grad student sets trumpet recital

Alison Bowen, graduate student in trumpet performance, will present a trumpet recital of works by John Barnes Chance, J.G.B. Neruda, Frank Campo and others Friday.

Bowen will be joined by pianist Anita Hutton, horn player Philip Stanley and trombonist Jim Owens.

The recital will be held at 8 p.m. in the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall located between Woody and Fane halls.

The public is invited. Admission is free.

Bryant responds to this philosophy by saying, "I'm not very hostile to my opponents. I really believe that if I'm going to be the kind of Christian I should be that I'm going to turn the other cheek."

"I don't think we've got time to sit around and attack each other. I think we need to get at the hand of setting people free," he said.

Not all Christian rock musicians may be performing Christian rock because of religion, however.

"I THINK there are contemporary Christian rock musicians who may be doing it for the wrong reason," Bryant said, "but it's not the music and the beat that has the influence. It's the spirit behind it."

"It's music that will encourage you. It'll bless you, give you some answers, some directions. But it's not to be worshipped," Bryant added.

Fundamentalists have banned Christian rock concerts in several cities, and many believe that the commercialism of Christian rock distorts the religious message behind the music.

"I DON'T think there's any threat right now of any of us becoming millionaires," Bryant said, laughing. "As a promoter, I've never made any money from a Christian rock concert. I do it for love. I do it because I'm committed to the purpose."

Bryant does not take Christian music lightly. At his home studio, his equipment includes two JVC turntables, an Akai reel-to-reel tape player, mammoth-sized speakers, an entire wall of cassette tapes and stacks of albums. With these and the equipment at the WCIL studio, he produces a music magazine format for his radio show.

"I share personal experiences," Bryant said. "I talk about things people are really going through like hurt, loneliness, rejection, the uncertainty of 'what do I do after I get out of college?'"

THE MUSIC Bryant plays and the bands he promotes may surprise people who are not familiar with their methods. For example, Stryper is billed as "heavenly metal for righteous head-bangers." During their concerts, group members fling New Testaments into the audience. Rez Band, formerly Resurrection Band, is billed as "high octave evangelism."

"There is a spirit behind the music we listen to. You can see it in writing and painting too," said Bryant, who believes that God looks at the reason or message of the music more than just the methods.

"It's just like painting," he said. "You could say painting is a gift but you could use it for pornography and exploit women."

"ESTABLISHED SERVICE YOU CAN DEPEND ON"

Doctors, medical workers guilty of Medicaid fraud scheme

CHICAGO (UPI) — Eleven doctors and medical workers were convicted Wednesday of cheating the state Medicaid system out of almost $20 million in the largest Medicaid fraud trial in the nation's history.

The 11 defendants were convicted of running 22 clinics known as "syrup houses" that illegally handed out codeine-based cough syrup and a sedative to drug addicts in Chicago's poor neighborhoods.

The defendants dispensed the narcotics and in return, drug users submitted to tests and accepted other prescription drugs they did not need. The useless tests and other prescription drugs were illegally charged to Medicaid.

"I hope people get the message," said special federal prosecutor David J. Stetler. "If people think they can rip off the public aid system, they're going to pay the price."

Morton Goldsmith, a Skokie pharmacist who was convicted on 87 counts, faced a possible sentence of life imprisonment, prosecutors said. U.S. District Judge John Grady did not immediately set a sentencing date.

Goldsmith, pharmacist Vito Sblendorio, Drs. Jaraslov Herda and Jason Smith, and medical technicians Pamela Wooley and Bobby Peterson were convicted of continuing a criminal enterprise, conspiracy to continue the criminal enterprise and racketeering.

The remaining defendants were found guilty of mail fraud and various drug charges.

Later in the day, the jury decided Goldsmith must pay the government $8 million of the $10 million prosecutors say he made from the scheme.

Five other defendants were ordered to pay lesser amounts.

Goldsmith is free on bond for 10 days, during which time he must turn his assets over to the federal government.

The jury of two men and 10 women deliberated for five days after hearing two months of testimony in the trial of Goldsmith, two other pharmacists, five doctors, two medical technicians and a secretary charged in the massive fraud scheme.

"They carried out unnecessary tests — sold lots of other items to camouflage the sale of narcotics," Stetler said in his closing arguments last week. He said the defendants ran a "public aid fraud mill."

It was the largest Medicaid fraud trial in the nation's history, prosecutors said.

Attorney Richard Walsh, who defended Herda, said he would file an appeal after his client was sentenced.

Stetler presented a motion to revoke Goldsmith's $50,000 signature bond, saying he could flee the country.

"He has not only a substantial amount of money, but he has hidden that money," Stetler said.

Grady ruled the equity on the Goldsmith house, which is in Goldsmith's wife's name, would suffice as bond.

Physical education chairman accepts position in Minnesota

Michael G. Wade, chairman of the Physical Education Department, will leave SIU-C in March to take a position at the University of Minnesota.

Wade, whose research specialties center on human motor performance, particularly of children and the handicapped, will become director of Minnesota's School of Physical Education, Recreation and School Health.

Wade, 44, has headed SIU-C's Physical Education Department since 1981. He taught at the University of Illinois for more than 13 years before that and headed U of I's Leisure Behavior Research Laboratory.

He also has taught at the University of Guelph, Ontario, and was schoolmaster of Watford Boys Grammar School in his hometown of Watford, England.

Wade directed a institute in the Netherlands on motor skills development in children under a summer 1985 grant from NATO.

Wade has a master's and a Ph.D. degree from U of I and earned an undergraduate diploma from Loughborough College, England.

International food fair set

Food from nine countries will highlight an international food fair, scheduled for 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday at the Interfaith Center 913 S. Illinois Ave. The International Spouses Group is sponsoring the event, which will feature food from China, Austria, Sweden, India, Iran, Malaysia, Mexico, Nepal and Sudan.

Information and artifacts from the represented countries will be presented at the fair, and recipes for the foods served will be available for visitors.

The International Spouses Group is a newly formed organization that helps the spouses of international students become more involved in the community. The new group is associated with the International Friends Club of SIU.

Tickets for the food fair are available at the International Students Services, 910 S. Forest St., for $5. Tickets will not be available at the door, but individual pieces of food will be sold at the fair.

Program aids in 'kicking the habit'

Carbondale Memorial Hospital and American Lung Association will co-sponsor a "Freedom from Smoking" program to help smokers quit smoking.

The two-hour program begins Jan. 23 at 7 p.m. and runs for seven consecutive Thursdays at the hospital's second floor Family Practice Center Conference Room.

"Freedom from Smoking" emphasizes breaking the habit using small group support and behavior modification.

Cost of the program is $30 with $10 refundable if all sessions are attended and quitting is achieved on Quit Night and maintained throughout the program.

To register, or for more details, call Marlene Matten, course coordinator, at 549-0721, extension 5141.

Saluki baseball team gears for success in 1986 season

By Ron Warnick
Staff Writer

Many sports fans around the nation are spending most of their time thinking about the Bears in the Super Bowl and college hoops.

But Saluki baseball coach Richard "Itchy" Jones clearly had other things in mind as he shined a pair of cleats in his office.

"We're getting ourselves prepared to go play Miami of Florida at the beginning of the season on March 8, and Miami happens to be the national champions," Jones said.

Almost unnoticeably, the Saluki baseball team began daily practice after Christmas break on Jan. 12, running drills and taking batting practice wherever conditions were favorable.

"We try to practice wherever the weather permits us. Sometimes we practice at night, sometimes in the morning, but most are in the afternoons," Jones said.

"This week, we'll use the baseball field and use the batting cages when it's dry. But I don't want to practice there too much because I don't want to tear up the field."

Jones said that when the weather gets cold and rainy again, the team will try to take up ground balls when it can on the AstroTurf at the football field or on the blacktop surface in back of the Arena.

"But the stadium isn't a great place to practice, because either you don't have a right field or a left field, and there isn't much of a center field," he said.

"If the weather gets too bad, we'll use two cages in the Arena except during concerts and basketball games. We'll try to do everything a team would do outside," Jones said.

The Salukis are still at a disadvantage because Miami will have ideal weather conditions almost every day and are probably better conditioned than SIU, Jones said.

"But there have been times that we've never been outside practicing before the trip south," Jones added.

The 10-game road trip in Miami is rough way to start a season, but its purpose is more than just gaining some victories, Jones said.

"If you come out of there knowing your personnel with no one getting hurt, you know you've had a good road trip," Jones said.

The 1986 baseball Salukis are looking to improve on last year's 28-29 record. After splitting a four-game series with powerful Wichita State, the Salukis seemed bound for post-season action with a 28-17 record. But the Dogs collapsed, losing their last 12 games and finishing in the Missouri Valley basement.

"The talent was good last year — we just had an undogly finish. But we have most of the same hitters we had a year ago. They ought to be more mature and better players, but they must forget what happened. We have to come back, start all over and put together a good year," Jones said.

Those returning from last year's team include infielder Jay Burch, who led the Salukis with a .351 batting average, and outfielders Gerald Pitchford and Robert Jones, who both led the club with 11 home runs.

Newcomers to the roster include utility player Joe Hall, from Paducah, Ky.; Shane Gooden, a pitcher-infielder from Herrin, Ill.; and catcher Tim McKinley, from Plain City, Ohio.

"To be a success this year, we need good, consistent years from a lot of players. This group of kids has to learn to be competitive and learn to win," Jones said.

Swim team gets 2 recruits

By Sandra Todd
Associate Sports Editor

The Saluki men's swim team acquired two more talented athletes for their lineup over Christmas break who are officially able to compete at the next meet on Jan. 31 against Auburn at the Recreation Center.

Gustavo Torrijos, an athlete who trained under Coach Doug Ingram for two years while at Indian River Junior College in Ft. Pierce, Fla., specializes in the 200-yard breaststroke and the 200 individual medley.

Torrijos, a native of the Canary Islands, said that part of the reason he came to SIU was to look for a university college where he could swim toward his goals of competing in the World Championships in Madrid and the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

"Since I knew Doug Ingram from Indian River, I knew he was a very good coach, so I came here," Torrijos said.

Ingram said that although Torrijos has been training with a club team during his one-year layoff from competition, he is not in top condition and "will have to do a lot of work in a short time" to match the training stage of the rest of the team.

A four time junior college All-American and the juco national-record holder in the 200 breaststroke as well as juco national champion in the 100 and 200 breaststrokes, Torrijos has two years of eligibility left to swim for the Salukis and will be studying physical education.

"It will be exciting to have another opportunity to coach Gustavo," Ingram said. "I hope it starts a trend for top junior college athletes to come our way."

Also joining the roster is Alexander Yokochi, a breaststroker from Lisbon, Portugal, who took seventh in the 200-meter breaststroke at the 1984 Olympics with a time of 2:19.96.

Ingram said that in the past year, Yokochi improved his time to 2:18.82 and is ranked No. 10 in the world for the event. He also took second in the 200 at the World-University Games in Cobe, Japan.

In an exhibition race against the Cincinnati Bearcats last weekend, Yokochi sped to a 2:04.6 in the 200-yard breaststroke, a substantial victory against his challengers.

Ingram said that although Yokochi will move into the top spot for the 200, the 100 spot is "still close."

Yokochi said that he came to SIU because he knew some of the other swimmers on the team, mainly Torrijos.

Like Torrijos, Yokochi hopes his Saluki swimming career leads him to Seoul in 1988.

Eligibility-wise, Yokochi is a freshman. Academically he is a sophomore and will be studying chemistry.

"He is a substantial plus for our team, especially in mid-year," Ingram said, also noting that both recruits are receiving scholarships.

Super Bowl quarterbacks are stark contrasts

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Unlike Jim McMahon, Charles Carroll Eason IV doesn't wear his emotions on his headband.

The starting quarterbacks for Super Bowl XX share the same age (26) and little else.

McMahon, a record-breaking passer at Brigham Young, has guided the Bears to this game in a brash, rebellious style well suited to Chicago's bustling Michigan Avenue.

Eason's reflective manner shimmers off Walden Pond.

"The personality of the coach trickles down to the team," says New England's Eason, who goes by the name of Tony. "Coach (Raymond) Berry is calm no matter what happens — so are we. His personality rubs off on us and he gives us confidence."

When McMahon drags his sore left buttock into the Superdome, he may actually remove his sunglasses for the first time this week. After finishing as the NFC's No. 2 passer in the regular season, McMahon has completed 59 percent of his playoff attempts and has thrown 66 consecutive passes without being intercepted.

"Steve Fuller has proven in the past he can win ballgames," says McMahon of Chicago's backup quarterback. "But personally, I feel we're a better team with me on the field."

They're certainly more interesting.

"He's off the wall," says Chicago right guard Tom Thayer of the man he's paid to protect. "You never know what to expect from him ... I think he's an offensive lineman in a quarterback's body."

While McMahon has bellowed like a carnival barker this week, Eason prefers the soft sell. A No. 1 draft pick in 1983, Eason enjoyed a superb sophomore season in 1984, finishing as the third-rated quarterback in the league. New England struggled to a 2-3 start this season before Eason separated his shoulder against Buffalo.

Steve Grogan started six straight games before fracturing a leg bone against the Jets Nov. 24. Eason returned a more confident and secure player and his postseason performance has been flawless. His quarterback rating has doubled to an astonishing 135.6 as Berry has implemented a ball-control attack.

"Since Day One, we have concentrated on executing without digging a hole for ourselves," Eason says. "We struggled with our offense in the beginning of the year, but we hung together. How many teams win with a new offense in their first year? I made mistakes but we stayed together and developed as a team."

Eason will face one added obstacle Sunday: Chicago's fearsome defense.

"That 46 defense of Chicago causes a lot of problems because they have a way of getting eight guys to the line of scrimmage," says Eason, who was sacked six times by the Bears Sept. 15 in a 20-7 setback. "It seems one guy is always unaccounted for. The biggest problem is what they do to our five people up front."

McMahon boasts a 25-4 mark in his last 29 starts and although his eyes are often hidden, his drive for perfection is not.

"Sometimes, Jira reminds me of myself," says Chicago Coach Mike Ditka, offering his supreme compliment.

McMahon has changed Ditka calls in the playoff huddle and the Bears have scored. He'll have more trouble shaking his image as an iconoclast.

"I like to do strange things and act crazy to see what reaction I get," McMahon says. "I laugh at myself, too, for some of the things I do."

Eason will have the final laugh Sunday if he can solve Chicago's complex defensive scheme. Perhaps then, when he's clutching Super Bowl champagne, will Champaign Tony let himself go.

"Tony has improved tremendously in the last few months both as a player and as a young man," says New England wide receiver Irving Fryar. "He's gonna be one of the best before he's through."

Warriors lose to Knicks as Mullin returns to old home

NEW YORK (UPI) — During warmups everyone wanted a piece of him:

"Chris, how's it goin'?"

"Chris, where you gonna be after the game?" "Yo, Chris."

And Chris Mullin of the Golden State Warriors, returning to New York for his first game as a professional, took care of his people Tuesday night. He shook hands, exchanged hellos — working the room like a politician.

In a sense, Madison Square Garden was Mullin's room for four years at St. John's. He was an All-America and the country's top player. And he brought an electricity to New York college basketball that had not been there in a generation.

During introductions, 19,000 fans stood and applauded for nearly a minute. Mullin acknowledged them, extending his left arm high as if finishing off a jumper.

"It was beautiful," he would say later, after the New York Knicks had won 121-114 in overtime. "That's something that happens once in a lifetime."

They cheered when he touched the ball on an in-bounds play, and when he buried his first shot from the left side over Rory Sparrow.

But, in many ways, this clearly was not Mullin's night. His shots clanked off the rim. Late in the game he was barely part of the offense. He missed 7-of-10 shots, finishing with 11 points.

That was the least of his problems. On Monday night, his 20-year-old brother John suffered a ruptured appendix. When John Mullin was admitted to Long Island College Hospital in Brooklyn his blood pressure was so low doctors could not operate for eight hours.

Following surgery John was placed on a respirator. A hospital spokeswoman Wednesday said his condition had been upgraded from "critical" to "serious."

"He keeps getting better and better," she said.

Chris Mullin spent Monday night at the hospital and slept fitfully the next day.

"It was the only thing on my mind," he said. "The other stuff is secondary. When something like this happens, it puts everything in perspective."

The homecoming had become a vigil. And even the comfort of friends and teammates had its darker side.

"It was real good to see them," Mullin said of the St. John's players in the stands. "But it makes you a little homesick. It's almost better not to see them because when you leave it makes it that much harder."

Mullin has had an erratic rookie season. He has moved into the starting lineup and is averaging more than 14 points a game.

"The players are bigger and stronger," he said in comparing the NBA with college. "Sometimes in college getting open was not that tough and you would have time to take your shot. Now when you get open you have maybe a half second."

Mullin is by no means a fast player, and opponents try to isolate him on defense. Each night is then another crash course on life in the pros.

"I love this place; I really do," he said. "I tried to downplay it, telling myself that it was nothing special. But

Sweetness in Bowl at last; his followers on Cloud 34

By Laura Milbrath
Student Writer

When Walter Payton stepped onto Soldier Field one autumn afternoon in 1977, he knew nothing of the 10-year-old girl munching hot dogs in the stands while watching her first Chicago Bears football game.

Payton had no idea as he darted around, leaped over, and collided with his opponents that one small head with two bright eyes would be following his every move with fascination and that he had another fan to add to his rapidly growing legion of devotees.

It's been eight and a half years since I was that 10-year-old in the stands and now, with the Bears making their first Super Bowl ever, life couldn't be any better for their fans, who are on Cloud Nine.

It used to be that when the Bears were mentioned, the jeers and snorts from fans of other teams would drown out any confident statement that a Bears fan might make.

Now, however, all of the disbelievers have been silenced. Dumbfounded, they shrug their shoulders and admit that the Chicago Bears have become simply amazing. Gone are the days when spectators filed into stadiums waging on just how badly the Bears would lose that day.

I remember one day in Minnesota in 1980 when the Bears were playing the Vikings and I was one of the few Bears fans in the stadium, proudly wearing my Bears cap in the sea of Viking purple and yellow. Despite the fact that the Bears lost, I cheered at the end of the game, "Let's hear it for the Bears everybody!"

More than a few heads turned to stare at the fan who was waving a little flag for the losing team. I was not under any delusion. I was simply a fan who would never give up hope.

Last December, I, with about 200 other fans, waited outside of the Bears' locker room before a game when Walter appeared. I shouted, "Yay, Walter!" He looked quickly over his shoulder as hundreds of hands reached out to pat him on the back and shake his hand, but probably was not able to see who had called to him. That was as close as I had ever been to my hero.

But I got my chance to meet Walter Payton a few weeks ago when a friend and I drove to the Bears' training camp in Lake Forest. It was 7 a.m. as we anxiously waited for members of the team to arrive. We were lucky enough to see William "Refrigerator" Perry, Steve Fuller and Mike Hartenstein.

The long-awaited moment came when I caught a glimpse of Walter Payton just about to go into the building. Feeling suddenly overwhelmed at the prospect of meeting Walter, I finally managed to call out, "Mr. Payton?" He looked surprised at what must have seemed to him an unusual greeting, but then he grinned and my eight years of Bears-mania came out in a rush and I raced over to shake his hand.

As I talked a mile a minute, Walter posed for pictures. I was aware of the fact that one of the greatest players in football and the subject of so many covers of magazines was politely waiting for me to adjust my little pocket camera — he truly lived up to his nickname of "Sweetness."

There was nearly an embarrassing moment when in all of my confusion and excitement of switching poses and passing the camera, I practically handed the camera to Walter and asked him to take some snapshots of my friend and me.

Payton has set an example for athletes everywhere and has become a symbol for what one can achieve with an unfailing dedication to a sport. His constant desire to achieve more than the next person and his constant challenging of his own stamina have brought him many accolades and awards. However, the man who in 1984 became the greatest runner in pro football's history has one more goal to achieve — wearing the Super Bowl championship ring on his finger.

When Walter Payton steps onto the field in New Orleans on Jan. 26 and into the brilliant light of fame, he probably will be thinking of the long hours of training, of the seasons of disappointment and of determination and dreams.

Somewhere there will be another 10-year-old watching Walter Payton for the first time who will be captured by his magic which comes to life on the football field. We Bears fans know the magic has always been there. It has been waiting all these years for Super Bowl XX.

as someone else, we can't trick them.

"They've seen too much of us, on films and when we played them. We know we've just got to out-execute them, and if we execute offensively, they can't beat us," he said.

The Dolphins used their passing game to its fullest against Chicago, posting a 38-24 victory. Marino passed for 270 yards and three touchdowns.

Miami's offense features the passing game of Marino, while the Patriots learned during the season that they were a running team.

"You've got to play within your personnel," said New England running back Robert Weathers. "We gained some knowledge by watching the Miami-Chicago game, but we can't use what other teams did."

Tight end Derrick Ramsey agreed.

"We have to do what we do best. We have a different approach than Miami does. They come out throwing to set up the run, while we just take what the defense gives us. We're a balanced team that's not in the habit of trying to force the ball."

New England's running attack centers on Jesse Craig James, who says Berry values the team's rest too much to use that time learning new plays or formations.

"We would have to put a lot more time in, but the coach wants us to keep our energy level up when it's this late in the season," explained James.

Pats have to be themselves

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — One of Raymond Berry's favorite films documents the destruction of the Chicago Bears by the Miami Dolphins Dec. 2, 1985.

As much as Berry has watched the film and come to appreciate the Dolphins' tactics, he doubts his players can imitate them.

"Some of the things the Miami Dolphins can do, we can't, we don't have the personnel or the (offensive) scheme," said Berry at a press conference Wednesday.

"Sometimes, while watching the film of that game, we can only sit there in admiration," he lamented. "We can't just put things (new plays) in a week."

This season, in his first full year as head coach, Berry installed a new offense. New England quarterback Tony Eason says Don Shula's tenure in Miami is one reason for the Dolphins' effectiveness on offense.

"Miami can do a lot of things because Don Shula's been there so long and everyone has been using that same system for anywhere from one to 10 years," said Eason. "That way they can adjust to their opponents more easily."

After practicing the same offense for six months, guard Ron Wooten says New England cannot change its brand of football.

"We've got to retain the Patriots' style, which means the running game and play-action passes, that kind of thing. We can't beat the Bears

"A big difference between us and Miami is that Marino likes to air it out and throw for 40 or 50 yards. With guys like (Mark) Clayton, (Mark) Duper and Nat Moore — who I see as being the key — someone is going to get free four or five times in a game," he said.

Les Steckel, the Patriots quarterbacks and receivers coach, said that recognizing a winning style doesn't mean it can be duplicated.

"People accuse coaches of being copycats, but you can't just say: 'Let's do it the way they did,'" he said. "Teams have to know their limitations."

Pats' running back Tony Collins suggested another reason the New England offense might surprise the Bears.

"We use four running backs," Collins said. "We stay fresh. We are going to pound at them and pound at them until they tire out."

"I know they have a great defense," Collins continued. "But we have big offensive linemen and a lot of running backs. We really believe we can wear them down."

"In all of our games, you could see we were the stronger team in the fourth quarter," Collins said. "And the Super Bowl is going to be won in the fourth quarter."

Women cagers topple Sycamores, 68-46

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's basketball team knocked off Gateway rival Indiana State, 68-46, led by sophomore Annee Thouvenin in the first start of her career, at Davies Gymnasium Wednesday night.

If you had told Thouvenin early Wednesday that she would not only start the game, but also score the most points for the Salukis, she probably would not have believed it.

"It was kind of a shock," Thouvenin said of being told she would replace Ann Katreh, who came down with flu. "I had no idea until I got here tonight. I had to sit down and get in the right frame of mind -- I was a little scared at first."

In the first half, the Salukis kept the Sycamores scoreless with full-court pressure defense until the 16:03 mark. The Sycamores stayed under double figures for the first 14 minutes, with the Salukis ripping open a 20-point lead on the strength of dominance in the lane and balanced scoring.

Thouvenin pitched in eight points on long bombers to pace the Salukis in the first half. Off the bench, junior forward Cozette Wallace nailed three in a row plus a free throw to tally seven first-half points, while freshman back-up center Cathy Kampwerth added six.

As Saluki starters went to the bench to rest or stay out of foul trouble, Sycamore leader Amy Hile got untracked for 10 points to help pull ISU within 15 at the half, 36-21.

Sycamore coach Andrea Myers said, "Our problem all year has been that we don't have any offense -- we just don't have a big, powerful inside game. Size-wise, we were no match once the ball got inside."

The Salukis continued the pounding in the paint to increase to the largest margin, 58-30, with 9:10 remaining. However, the lead dwindled somewhat when the Salukis second string took over, but they fought hard and kept the final margin above 20.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said, "We felt this would be a good game for playing time for the kids. I hate to see it get sloppy late, but games like this lend themselves to that."

Hile gave 100 percent to score the game-high 25 points, but she received little help from her teammates, none of whom hit double figures.

Scott's "zone-buster" Thouvenin totaled 14 points to top the Salukis. The Salukis big people all notched double digits, led by starting center Mary Berghuis with 11 points and the game-high 10 rebounds. Kampwerth and Bridgett Bonds added 10 points each.

To the credit of the Sycamores' defense or the pain of a sore foot, Saluki senior leader Petra Jackson missed double figures for the first time since posting 23 consecutive 10-plus performances.

"Jackson has four points and we still win by 22? That speaks highly for our players," Scott said.

The Salukis (11-3, 6-0) edge into a half game Gateway lead over Drake (10-5, 5-0) which plays Thursday night at Southwest Missouri. ISU dropped to 2-14, 1-5.

Men cagers to face Indiana State Sycamores

Last season's 14-15 Indiana State Sycamores, who will face the Salukis Thursday night at 7:35 p.m. in the Arena, were a defensively-diluted, run-and-gun team that produced high-scoring games.

Under the tutelage of first-year coach Ron Greene, the 1985-'86 Sycamores' 2-3 zone has vaulted the squad to third in the country in scoring defense, allowing an average of 56.1 points per game, a far cry from 1984-'85's 77.7 ppg.

With Saturday's convincing 67-54 victory over Wichita State, the Sycamores raised their overall record to 8-5, 2-2 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

But Greene, who amassed 307 wins in 18 years of college coaching at Loyola-New Orleans, New Orleans, Mississippi State and Murray State, modestly understates his new team's early success.

"I wouldn't consider us a powerful team at all. We're more of a lightweight in the conference. We're in a rebuilding process, and a lot like SIU -- we're starting three freshmen at least some of the time," Greene said.

"We are pleased with our progress, but we have a lot of games left in the season," Greene added.

Back in the lineup not a moment too soon to challenge the formidable Sycamore defense is guard Steve Middleton, who injured his ankle last week in practice. Middleton practiced for the first time this week on Tuesday and "looked good," Coach Rich Herrin said.

Other probable starters are Randy House and Doug Novsek at forward, Ken Dusharm at center and Brian Welch in the other guard spot.

"They do have two excellent scorers in Middleton and Novsek," Greene said, "but we try not to be as concerned about our opponent as we are with ourselves and our performances."

But an opponent Herrin is definitely concerned about is 6-foot-5, 185-pound senior guard John Sherman Williams. Williams, an All-America candidate, is averaging 20.6 points and 6.1 rebounds per game.

"When you have such a player, it makes the other players much, much better," Herrin said.

"There are two ways to stop them: let Williams get his points and stop the others, or turn right around and try to hold him down. We may use a combination defense," he said.

Backing up Williams is back-up forward Darrien Applewhite, an outside-shooting 6-6, 190-pound freshman averaging 9.4 points and 4.9 rebounds a game.

The other forward is 6-4, 190-pound senior Jeff Macomb.

Macomb, a fine rebounder, averages 6.7 boards and 8.0 points per game.

Center Larry Bush is the Sycamores' strong inside player. The 6-8, 230-pound sophomore averages 7.6 points and 4.1 rebounds per game.

Six-foot-five, 185-pound guard Chris Harris has had his problems with shooting on the perimeter and foul line. The freshman, who averages 7.3 points and 2.1 rebounds per game, has hit only 48 percent of his shots from both the floor and charity stripe.

Bench guards Bryan Kegerreis and Antonio Gillespie average 6.8 points and 2.0 rebounds per game collectively.

Wilson confident of first Super Bowl shutout

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The New England Patriots are delighted that Chicago Bears' Otis Wilson has predicted his team will shut them out Sunday in the Super Bowl.

Some of Wilson's teammates would prefer Wilson shut something else before prognosticating zeroes.

"I hear people saying things like that and I think 'be quiet,'" Bears' middle linebacker Mike Singletary said. "If we go in thinking shutout and they score seven points, we're defeated already."

That fact is not lost on the Patriots.

"I'll be the first to 'ell him when we score, 'there goes your shutout,'" said New England running back Tony Collins.

Bears Coach Mike Ditka tried to cushion Wilson's remarks.

"He was not predicting anything, he was just talking," Ditka said. "He plays with a lot of fire and zeal early in the game and it fires up his teammates. Sometimes he might not even know what he's doing, but at least he's doing something."

Some teams fear the sort of forecasting Wilson has engaged in. They believe it inspires the opposition and simply provides another target for underdogs to shoot at.

Wilson has total confidence in his crystal ball.

"I said we would shut out the Giants, I said we would shut out the Rams," said Wilson, the Bears' Pro Bowl left outside linebacker. "I should go in thinking like that. What am I supposed to say, that we're going to give up a lot of points?"

The Bears set an NFL record by posting back-to-back playoff shutouts. Wilson now expects another first -- a Super Bowl shutout.

"I see a big goose egg," Wilson said. "That's never been done."

"We set a goal throughout the playoffs to shut everybody down. We got two already, one to go."

Wilson said he long ago predicted his own selection to the Pro Bowl, his first in six NFL seasons.

"I said that back when I came into the league as a rookie," said Wilson, a first-round draft choice out of Louisville in 1980.
